Requirements

Overview

Support for instructor to quickly delete messages in a forum. The current process for deleting messages is cumbersome for instructors that need to delete a large amount of messages at once.

Use Cases

1) An instructor notices that the majority of the messages that have been posted to a particular thread are off topic and he wants to delete the thread and recreate it.

2) An instructor is cleaning up a thread and getting rid of irrelevant messages and messages that do not contribute substantially to the thread.

Notes

To support the ability to quickly delete messages and threads, we have added "Delete" links next to each thread and message, which when clicked will not display a delete confirmation message, but will instead immediately delete the thread/message and then provide the instructor with an opportunity to restore the thread/message.

The usability team recommends that we do not allow a user to delete a thread without also deleting the associated messages, which is why the only action that may be taken on a thread is to delete the entire thread. The usability team's review of the requirements for this functionality is included in this design as Appendix A.

- If an instructor clicks the "Delete Thread" link, next to a thread, the system will delete the thread and any associated messages, using a Fade Out transition (http://developer.yahoo.com/ypatterns/pattern.php?pattern=fadeout). Then the system will replace the subject of the thread with "Deleted by <Name of User who Deleted Thread>" as shown in the ITV: Show Deleted Thread screen (SDT-1), using a Fade In transition (http://developer.yahoo.com/ypatterns/pattern.php?pattern=fadein).

Notes

- If an instructor clicks the "Delete" link, next to a child message, the system will delete the message, using a Fade Out transition (http://developer.yahoo.com/ypatterns/pattern.php?pattern=fadeout). Then the system will replace the subject of the message with "Deleted by <Name of User who Deleted Message>" as shown in the ITV: Show Deleted Message screen (SDM-1), using a Fade In transition (http://developer.yahoo.com/ypatterns/pattern.php?pattern=fadein).
- If a child message has replies, the replies will be moved to the top-level of the thread.

Note: It is extremely important that these transitions occur as quickly as possible as the goal of this functionality is to give instructors a way to quickly delete forum messages. If the fade out and fade in transitions are not fast enough, we may need to think about another solution.

If an instructor deletes a thread, the thread and all associated messages will be deleted. A placeholder will remain for the thread and the thread's subject will be replaced by the text "Deleted by <Name of User who Deleted Thread>". Beneath this text, in parentheses, the system will display "Deleted <Date and Time Thread was Deleted>".

Also, the system will include a "Restore Thread" link.

- If an instructor clicks the "Restore Thread" link, the system will immediately restore the thread and all associated messages.

Note: The restored thread and all associated messages will retain the same unread status they had prior to being deleted.

- If a user clicks the "Hide Deleted Messages" link, the system will remove the deleted messages from the user's view, for the current and any future sessions, and will change the "Hide Deleted Messages" link to "Show Deleted Messages".

Note: The system will remember and reflect the user's preference on all related screens (ITV2-1, DET2-1 and DET2-2).
Note: The "Hide Deleted Messages" link will only be displayed if one or more messages have been deleted in the current Topic.
Note: The "Hide Deleted Messages" link is a personal preference and will be available to all users. This means that we will need to keep track of each user's preference for this option.
